

Arch Accident & Health Accident Protection for Employees

Types of Coverage

As a specialty insurance company, Arch's Accident & Health division offers accident, health, disability and travel products and services that may meet the needs of companies of any size.

Local Travel

Coverage for local travel may be helpful for any company that have employees who drive around town on business. This may be local sales calls, business lunches, court visits for attorneys, or even errands on behalf of the business. Employers who add coverage for local travel have added accident protection they may need.

International Business Travel

International travelers may face many risks including threats of war and political instability, natural disasters and even complicated medical emergencies. With the right plan in place, employers may be able to provide support when one of their employees on an international business trip needs help.

Domestic Business Travel

This type of coverage falls under a typical "Business Travel Accident" plan. Whether employees are traveling by car or by plane, they may be at risk for accidents, illnesses and even delayed trips and lost luggage. Having the right kind of coverage may help ease these situations.

Accident Coverage – On and Off Premises

A compliment to traditional workers compensation plans, this coverage may help if there are accidents that occur during the scope of employment. For example, it may provide accident coverage for teachers who are often on and off school grounds on the business of the school district. Small businesses may also find this type of accident coverage more fitting for their needs.

24/7 Coverage

This type of coverage may be offered, providing accident coverage during non-working hours and events.
